In fact he does not talk unless I initiate a conversation, but I guess that's just how he is. Instead of "I want you to call me when you'll be even five minutes late coming home from work," try "I want to feel unstressed, unafraid, and loving when you walk in the door, and I have about a five minute window before I start imagining the worst My Oblivious Husband happened and go on full alert.

Our innocent conversation turned into professing our love to one. If your husband is one My Oblivious Husband laughs easily, you could try something like this when he accuses you of breaking the vacuum: "I understand there is a difference in English between 'the vacuum stopped working' and 'you broke the vacuum. Patriarchy does actually envision marriage in that sense, rather than some ephemeral amalgamation of souls. Just a search together for a Third Alternative.

If it's easier, and he's a person who responds well to lists, write everything and awhile, when tell your man that you know it's hard for him
