Empower Your People Metrics give your people a sense of ownership for what they do through decision-making. Different companies will define this goal using their own industry jargon. Advanced search.

In other words, getting ahead of the curve before the curve gets you. When you zoom in, dig deeper, divide into smaller pieces and discard the unessential, the "aha" moment will come, and that's when you find easy-to-implement solutions with great impact. The money spent will not deliver the best return on investment and the change may not have a long lasting effect. Start the continuous improvement program off in a small way - limit it to just one office or just one department.

Authors Sunil Kumar V. We'll do our best to respond within 24 hours slightly late. As a manager, it's a good idea to monitor how many questions he or she asks compared with the number of statements he or she makes. Imagine what would happen if I took you and 10 of your colleagues to a junkyard and asked you to build whatever you wanted.
