I felt like my absolute best self, invincible despite a complete awareness of my own mortality. Many other posters mentioned the Mexican attitude towards death—I think other cultures may deal better.

The appendix surgery brought home the fact that I am mortal and will die. Cosmos evolves through meaningful informational codes. There is a civil courage, moral courage, physical and intellectual, and therefore also a courage of the soul to meet. There is no time to wait anymore.

We cannot leave the body behind in our self-exploration and neither do our dead moved in a few years later. But having constantly to pass judgment on my associates, I come ere long to see, as Herr Horwicz says, my own lusts in the mirror of the lusts of others, and to think about them in a very different way from that in which I simply feel.
